Brandmark Overview

Amana brandmarks are divided into three types

1. Primary Brandmark
2. Secondary Brandmark
3. Tertiary Brandmark:

Please use both brandmarks based on the rules to generate consistent brand recognition.

Secure Area Primary Brandmark

Secure area ensures good visibility when the brandmark is displayed to produce maximum effect. Secure area sets a clear boundary around the brandmark. This space should be made free from any visual element which could interrupt the brandmark impact. In the following illustration, the boundary method is set with the correct specification vsize, directing the space around the brandmark.

Primary Colors

Color is an important element to build visual unity of the brandmark, so it is necessary to use it correctly and consistently in order to show Amana character and attitude. The chosen colors have been designed to be used on various applications on different medium, such as printed media and website, to maintain consistency

For print usage, CMYK is the only color system which can produce the exact color used for the brandmark. It is highly recommended to use this color as frequent as possible. Use solid color as much as possible, please refer to Pantone code, but if Pantone color is unavailable, the closest match is the process color version (CMYK). For digital usage, use RGB color version as color reference.
